If your authentication process was in fact effective as you describe, how did Nike purchase multiple sets of fakes from your website? Would those fakes not have gone through the authentication process? Clearly it's flawed and as a result purchasers are ending up with inauthentic products that can't be returned and can't be resold.

Hey Natalie,

I understand your concerns regarding the authenticity of the item you purchased, following the recent claims made by Nike.

Our team in CS generally does not discuss legal matters, but here is the link to our official statement on the matter.

Before StockX, authentication wasn�t widely offered by secondary marketplaces and as a result, consumers didn�t have much trust in the resale industry. That lack of trust is what inspired our co-founders to build the platform and establish a job function focused on authentication. Authentication has always been at the core of our experience and has long set the industry standard.

Please know, each item that passes through our facility receives a thorough inspection prior to being sent to the Buyer. Our skilled authenticators receive consistent training to ensure that the item is authentic and within our condition guidelines as part of the verification process.

In addition to this, we have a team of subject matter experts with knowledge of specific products that identify and track critical issues and information at the product and brand level. We also have an internal team that is dedicated to managing our proprietary information and ensuring the latest information and industry trends are accounted for in our systems.

In instances where an item may not meet our quality standards - whether that be for manufacturing defects, deemed as worn or inauthentic, etc. - we will link the Buyer with a new, comparable Seller when possible, and issue a full refund when it is not. We are committed to providing a safe, authentic marketplace to trade current culture.

We stand firm in our process and the ability of our authentication team members to identify any concerns in the quality of items as they are received. Due to this, we are not currently accepting returns for items that have successfully completed our verification process and are outside of our standard return time frame.

We value our customers and we are committed to providing a safe, authentic marketplace to trade current culture
Best,
Tristan

wasn�t widely offered by secondary marketplaces and as a result, consumers didn�t have much trust in the resale industry. That lack of trust is what inspired our co-founders to build the platform and establish a job function focused on authentication. Authentication has always been at the core of our experience and has long set the industry standard.
